• PREFACE •

THE study of the autographs of great men and women has always exercised a peculiar fascination over the general public. One does not need to be a graphologist to find subjects for study in contemplating the signatures of those who have moulded the thoughts, prompted the activities, fought the wars and formed the laws of mankind. "Ex pede Herculem" seems to be the theory of the public and the collector alike in this respect. From the marked peculiarities of each signature one seems to be able to trace those idiosyncrasies of character which have made its writer great and famous. The signature in many cases is an epitome of a man's life, showing natural tendencies overcome and virtues developed by study and experience. It is, of course, always easy to prophesy after the event, and it may be that in looking at men's signatures we read them by the light history and biography give us; still, no matter how we explain the process, the fascination of studying autographs is one well understood and appreciated by thousands.

The publishers of this little volume have spent much time in collecting the autographs here given to the public. They hope the volume may prove interesting and profitable, and may induce many to become collectors. No particular merit is claimed for the work, except that of painstaking accuracy and artistic finish.

The classification will be readily understood, the aim having been to group names of individuals prominent in different employments and professions.

To aid the inexperienced in deciphering the more intricate "shadows of a name," an explanatory index will be found.

Chicago, July, 1893.
